EVENT HONOREE

Ed Scott was born in Panama. His father worked for Taca Airlines and mother worked for the U.S. government at the Panama Canal. Ed is one of three children. He has a brother that served in the Peace Corp and worked as a social worker in San Jose, California. Ed's sister, Janice, was the former mayor of Cocoa Beach from 1993-1999.

One of Ed's fondest memories of Scouting was a backpacking trip through Volcán Barú National Park. The summit of Panama's highest peak at 11,400 feet is the only place in the world where you can see the sunrise in the Atlantic and the sunset in the Pacific. He later put those scouting skills to use by taking his college friends back to the National Park.

At Balboa High School, Ed played baseball and football. Upon graduation, he went to Michigan State University where he played baseball. He earned a bachelor's degree in communication arts and political science from honors college at Michigan State University in only 3 years (without going to summer school). After graduation, he found work with the Panama Canal's personnel department. Ed mentioned that working there taught him all kinds of things that he had never thought of before, but which, helped prepare him for future opportunities. Ed's next move took him overseas to pursue a master's degree in philosophy, politics, and economics from the University of Oxford.

Upon graduation at Oxford, Ed began a 17-year career with the US government. It was during his time with the government where Ed met his wife Cheryl, who was one of the very first female systems programmers for the Department of the Army. After his time with the government, Ed made the decision to start his own company.

In 1978, Ed founded Office Power, Inc., an office automation firm. This was during a time where most people did not believe in automation and that "executives would never use keyboards". His business was purchased by another company. After his company was acquired, Ed spent 10 years in the technology sector where he was oversaw worldwide sales and marketing.

In early 1995, he co-founded BEA Systems, Inc. and served both as President of BEA and as Executive Vice President for Worldwide Field Operations, supervising BEA's sales, marketing, and services operations. BEA became the 12th largest software company in the world and was acquired by Oracle Corporation in 2008.

Since his time at BEA, Ed started a variety of philanthropic initiatives. One of the initiatives that Ed said he was most proud of was the founding the Center for Global Development in Washington, D.C. in 2001. He also is a co-founder, along with Bill Gates and George Soros, of what is now known as ONE, an advocacy organization dedicated to building public and political awareness about development problems in Africa. These are just a couple of the many local and worldwide philanthropies that Ed has founded.

Locally, Ed serves on the Board of Trustees of the Florida Institute of Technology and funded the creation of the Scott Center for Autism Treatment there. He serves on the Board of Directors of King Center for the Performing Arts in Melbourne, Florida. Ed is also very proud of the Kiwi Tennis Club, which he built to be one of the premier tennis facilities in the United States, located in Indian Harbour Beach, Florida.

Ed and Cheryl have been married for 32 years. Ed has a stepson who recently retired from Sun Microsystems (this makes Ed feel old to think of that). He has a son who is a lawyer in California, a daughter who is a journalist in Washington D.C., and another son who is an entrepreneur in Japan.
